Ulrich Drechsler

The woodwind player, composer and producer Ulrich Drechsler is considered one of the most stylistically versatile musicians in the field of jazz, club music, etc. . In his music, the Amadeus Award winner subtly combines elements of jazz, electronics, neo-classicism and film music, creating a completely independent sound language.

Since his first international successes with the acoustic club music trio "Café Drechsler", he has released over fifteen albums under his own name, some of them award-winning: including duets with outstanding pianists such as the Norwegian Tord Gustavsen or the Italian Stefano Battaglia, his unique Ulrich Drechsler Cello Quartet (a quartet consisting of bass clarinet, drums and two cellos). Since 2020, he has been presenting his most ambitious project to date, "Liminal Zone". A massive sound world consisting of several music projects, concert series, record label, etc. He also works successfully as a composer/producer of film music, curator, event organiser and conceptionist.

In addition to his own record label, Ulrich Drechsler is signed to the major label Universal Music and the German jazz label Enja Yellowbird.
